Indianapolis, IN. – Midwest Food Bank (MFB) is excited to welcome Todd Greenwood to its leadership team, where he will play a key role in advancing the organization’s mission through the distribution of $74 million in food and essential supplies. In addition to overseeing large-scale distribution efforts, Todd will work closely with partners and stakeholders to support the development of a new fully operational warehouse planned for 2027, strengthening MFB’s long-term capacity to serve those in need.

“We are excited to welcome Todd to Midwest Food Bank,” said Pat Burke, Chief Operations Officer. “His leadership experience, combined with his passion for service and faith, will be instrumental as we continue to expand our reach and impact.”

Todd brings a diverse background spanning multiple industries, most recently serving as Vice President of Strategic Partnerships at the Farm Journal Foundation, where he successfully led high-impact funding initiatives and programs. His ability to build meaningful partnerships and drive results will be critical as MFB continues to grow its network of supporters and resources.

In addition to his professional achievements, Todd has demonstrated strong leadership through his service on boards, including executive committee and chair positions, further highlighting his commitment to community and organizational excellence.

Raised on a cattle farm in Indiana, Todd’s values are deeply rooted in hard work and service. He is a graduate of Purdue University in West Lafayette, where he earned a Bachelor of Science in Health and Human Sciences, with a focus on Hospitality and Tourism Management.

“It is an honor to be joining the team at MFB. What a blessing to be part of an organization that is centered on faith, community, service, and integrity. I look forward to serving the team, advisory board, volunteers, and partners to provide nourishment and faith to those in need. I am grateful for the support and love of family, especially my wife Kathie, stepson Nathan and his wife Holly, daughter Sophia, and her husband Alex.”
